This conference is aimed at teachers, sports leaders, policy makers and key experts from the fields of education, sport, civil society and research institutions to review best practices and achievements of sport and education providers in this field. The course provides opportunities for teachers to develop the skills and understanding to help them to combine formal teaching with sports based pedagogies to tackle issues of racism and discrimination, as well as to involve communities and wider society in the process.

BACKGROUND

The organisations involved in the KROSSS-project have a clear understanding of indicators of inequality and discrimination in education and society through well established service monitoring frameworks and a vast track record in addressing educational and social inequalities based on strong evidence of need. Education and sports organisations are traditionally at the forefront of addressing these issues within schools, communities and the wider public. However, there is a lack of systematic research and analysis to link learning processes with sports philosophies and principles to address social problems. This conference seeks to review best practices and achievements of sport and education providers in this field and enable dissemination of learning from this process.

THE CONFERENCE WILL INCLUDE THEMES ON:

• Race and Society and implications for society
• Arsenal in the community
  o Principles of sport and racism
  o Developing links between clubs and schools
• The Vard Model
  o The project
  o Principles of the approach o Challenges and lessons
  o Developing links between clubs and schools
• Using sport for anti-racism education
  o Analysis of case studies
